Elbasan

University of Elbasan “Aleksandër Xhuvani”

29-30 April, 2025, Elbasan

We are pleased to invite all students to submit their papers for the 4th International Student Conference, "The role of students in global development perspectives" that will be held at the University of Elbasan "Aleksandër Xhuvani," on April 30, 2025.

Innovation led by students serves as a crucial source to enhance and transform our society. In this new journey, students take the lead and create innovative changes in their learning environment. Their unwavering commitment, intertwined with creativity, shifts paradigms and creates new opportunities. In this context, student-led innovation is the key tool to empower the future generation of change-makers. This collective effort to explore, develop, and implement innovative ideas fosters an entrepreneurial spirit and the ability to see beyond common challenges. Empowering the future generation of change-makers through student innovation lays the foundations for a more developed and improved society. Along this journey, students gain profound knowledge, develop new skills, and cultivate a culture of inquiry and experimentation.

The main objective of the University of Elbasan is to train professionals capable of facing development challenges in the fields of humanities, natural sciences, economics, and education, as well as technical medical sciences.

The organization of this conference is a good opportunity not only to enrich the academic experience with valuable research methods but also to engage within students' communities, regardless of their backgrounds and perspectives.

Work:	In the introduction, a detailed presentation of the importance of the problem that will be at the center of the paper is made. The introduction should briefly describe the basis for the work presented. The introduction shows the objectives and reasons for undertaking the study, the structure of the paper, as well as briefly the results obtained, the discussions carried out, and the new ones that the paper brings. <hr/> Theoretical background: In this part, a general description of the literature review is made and the proposed topic is established. In research work, one always starts from a theoretical base that is dominant in a certain scientific field. <hr/> Formulation of the problem and goals of the paper: The scientific problem must be clearly, precisely and well defined. The goals of the paper must be aligned with the problem. The presentation of the problem, even if it remains as such, must be meaningfully connected to the theoretical approach, but also to the hypotheses and anticipated research methods.

Questions and hypotheses: The question of the paper should be clearly formulated. It should imply a testable research hypothesis. The research hypothesis must be correctly formulated in order to avoid ambiguity and additional requirements. It is important to present the findings in such a way that conclusions can be drawn. In qualitative research, it is important to understand the researched phenomena correctly and to show that the experiences reflected in them help understanding and allow reaching certain conclusions. Whether we use quantitative research or a mixture of the two, it is also important to define a number of criteria by which a hypothesis is confirmed or denied.

Material and method should be presented in detail. Here are presented the different methods used in the study, as well as the statistical ones. Information should be sufficient to allow referrals.

Results and discussions should be clear and illustrated in tables and graphs. Experimental results should be statistically analyzed and conclusions drawn based on statistical reliability. The same results given by tables cannot be given by graphs, and vice versa.

Conclusions: The conclusions that come from the presented results should be fully discussed, directly related, and supported by the results achieved. Conclusions should not be speculative, taken from literature, general knowledge, or spontaneous knowledge.

Tables:

- The dimensions of tables, figures, and photographs should not exceed 12 cm in width by 18 cm in length.
 - Tables should be placed at appropriate points in the text, between paragraphs, not within them.
 - All tables should have table numbers and titles and be referenced by the table number in the text.
 - The number and title of a table should be placed above, outside, and in the center of the table. Font 10, only the table name in bold, and the description in italic only. Example: Table 1. General data from studies
 - Tables must be constructed using the Table function in Microsoft Word and must not include images or objects. They should not contain unnecessary spaces. Tables that are too long or too wide for a single page can be printed in a smaller font size or continued on the next page.

Figures:

- Figures, which include graphs, tables, maps, drawings, and photographs, must have a material impact on the content of an article and must not be used for decorative purposes.
 - Figures should be placed at appropriate points in the text, between paragraphs, not within them.
 - All figures should have figure numbers and titles and be referenced by the figure number in the text. The figure number and title should be placed above and outside the figure. Font 10, image title in bold only, and description in italic only Example: Figure 1. General data of studies
 - Images must be of high quality and fit on one page.

Acronyms:	Do not use non-standard abbreviations unless they appear at least three times in the text. Keep cuts to a minimum.
Notes/Footnotes:	Notes are located at the bottom of a page. They cite references or comment on a certain part of the text or comment on a certain part of the text. Notes refer to relevant sources; they let your readers know where certain material came from or where they can look for other sources on the subject.
References:	References are listed at the end of the paper. Please ensure that any references cited in the text are also present in the reference list (and vice versa). Unpublished results and personal communications are not recommended in the reference list. Literature citations throughout the article should be made using the name of the author, both authors, or the first author: e.g., in direct use in period: Uherkovich (1963); Brakefield & Dowdeswell (1985); Van den Hoek et al. (1995); while in general citation: Uherkovich, 1963; Brakefield & Dowdeswell, 1985; Van den Hoek et al., 1995. The literature should be written clearly and completely, with all authors, full title, comprehensible name of the publisher, and pages, as follows (for books and scientific articles, respectively): Literatura në fund të artikullit: Brakefield P. M. (1982): The ecological genetics of quantitative characters of Maniola jurtina and other butterflies. In: The biology of butterflies. Symposia of the Royal Entomological Society, London.
